REGIONAL EDUCATIONAL TECHNOLOGY CENTER

The Regional Educational Technology Center (RETC) is dedicated to serving and researching the professional development needs of educators. We believe that integrating research and practice provides fertile ground to create new possibilities for teaching and learning.

Our programs serve educators' professional development needs across grade levels and contexts, with a particular focus on educational technology. Current projects include,

- serving K-12 educators
 - across New York City through professional development activities in educational technology that include, graduate education classes, professional development resources, workshops, sessions, and conference presentations;
 - across the nation through our distance learning professional development program– the Anytime Anywhere Learning Professional Development School (Funded in part by a FIPSE/LAAP grant); and
 - across the field of teaching and learning through ongoing research.
- serving higher education and adult education faculty
 - through professional development activities including adult education courses, professional development seminars and workshops, and conference presentations;
 - through the publication of the journal Perspectives: the New York Journal of Adult Learning; and
 - through ongoing research.

Services available through the RETC include,

- professional development consultation, program development, presentations, workshops, and courses;
- research and evaluation design, services, and leadership;
- online learning and videoconferencing capabilities; and
- collaboration in grant writing and publication.

Contact us to see how we can help meet your professional development needs or partner with your organization to provide new solutions.
